

Tell elected officials to keep public notices in your newspaper, where you'll see them.

State law requires government entities at all levels, from water districts to city councils and school boards, to place notices of many of their activities in a legal newspaper. This is a legal newspaper.

Every year in the Missouri legislature — claiming tax money could be saved — bills are introduced to remove these notices from newspapers and place them on the internet.

But, maintaining a website is not free. Nor is access to it. Where is the savings?

And what is public accountability worth? Notices printed in a newspaper can't be hacked, and proof of notice given is obvious for all to see, without having to search on the internet.

Public notices on the internet simply do not fulfill their intended functions: To inform the public and provide accountability for public officials.

Tell ALL of your elected officials you want public notices to stay in the newspaper, where you'll see them.
